12 Essential Tips Concerts & End of Year Celebrations

1. Use Schedules, Calendars, Diaries to forewarn about upcoming events
2. Photos: Take Photographs or find pictures of people, places. Take Photos of teacher for next year AND the students in their class. (Likewise: Take Photos of relatives coming to stay)
3. Use Timers: Letting them know how long the Assembly, Concert or Activity will go for will make a huge difference to their anxiety levels. (If activities run overtime allow them to leave if they have stayed for the set time)
4. Give a JOB. In the concert let them be the stage hand, the door keeper. The school photographer. The more focused and clear their JOB the less stress.
5. Limit their choices and be very specific with choices. (ie: sit at end of row, not anywhere in hall!)
6. Give something in their hands as usually calm best when have something in their hands (see "teaching resources" in this newsletter)
7. Avoid verbal overload. Use visuals to support verbal and give only one instruction at a time
8. Set up clear rules and boundaries (especially for "special events")
9. Make social stories of upcoming events, books about holidays, change of teachers etc. Let them refer back to them and reread to prepare for
10. Avoid verbal arguments by redirecting them to what they should be doing. For Example: "Sit Down", "Start your work", "Pack away"
11. Give them a "buddy" make sure you pre-warn buddy and reward them for their help
12. Keep the drinks up and ensure go to the toilet. Once they are in busy hall, on bus could have meltdown as forgot to drink or go to toilet

Give the child a Job! Taking photos for the newsletter is effective or videoing the concerts for the class to watch.
